tion between the City of Arcata, Humboldt County, Open Door Community Health Centers, Arcata House Partnership and the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS).

This working group was created to better meet the needs of community members without access to services and reduce the impact of houselessness in the community.

“On behalf of the Arcata Homelessness Services Working Group, we couldn’t be more excited about receiving HEAP funding to complete this critical housing project. Our collaborative efforts are seeing results — we’re securing funds and delivering more services to those experiencing homelessness in Arcata. There’s always more work to be done, and I’m grateful to our community partners who are helping us to provide essential services and housing opportunities in our community,” said Arcata City Councilmember Sofia Pereira of the funding award.

In addition, working group collaborators have developed innovative ways to bring a range of services and care to those in Arcata without access to services, particularly those without housing.

The work of this group has resulted in establishing mobile medical care in Arcata through Open Door’s Mobile Medical Services team.

The Open Door team is now offering its mobile services every Thursday at the Arcata House Partnership Annex, located at 501 Ninth St. in Arcata.

DHHS’s Mobile Intervention Services Team (MIST) has now expanded its partnership to include the Arcata Police Department.

MIST partners clinical staff from County Mental Health with law enforcement to help identify and engage houseless members of the community with serious mental health issues and substance abuse disorders.

The goals for MIST participants are to receive mental health and/or substance abuse disorder treatment and to obtain and retain stable housing.

AMS picks SeaQuake beer for 2019 OysterFest

Kevin L. Hoover
MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA — When bivalve-en-thrusted attendees at the 29th Annual Arcata Bay Oyster Festival sidle up to the beer taps on Saturday, June 15, they'll have three choices, all of one brand: SeaQuake Space Sailor IPA, Fogline Pale Ale, or Blonde Ale. Sea-Quake, a Crescent City brewery (and pub) has exclusive beer-pouring privileges at this year's OysterFest, and that choice by Arcata Main Street (AMS) has again rankled an area brewer.

Six Rivers Brewery co-owner Meredith Maier said her “triggered response” was “Bullshit,” to what she said was “AMS implications that we didn’t support the Arcata community.”

To AMS President Vicky Joyce, it was a tough choice, one made over a period of weeks, weighing a number of factors but coming down to what is best for AMS and the downtown community.

“We offered a 50 percent discount on 30 kegs and evidently it wasn’t enough of a donation for an event that in previous years, per event has poured over 17,000 pints amassing close to $100,000 in revenue,” Maier said in a Facebook post. “We need all the support we can get. We want to see this county thrive. Our work and time and products are valuable and when they are used as a pawn in a scheme to play people and businesses against each other we can’t sit idle. Arcata Main Street isn’t helping the community, they actually appear to be seeking to divide us.”

Her post brought a cascade of condemnation against AMS’s choice, casting it as, among other things, anti-women-owned businesses, “a big F U to local businesses” and a reason to boycott the OysterFest.

AMS, though, says it came down to fulfilling its core mission — serving the downtown Arcata business community, and the community at large. “We asked for proposals from all local breweries,” Joyce said. “All were incredibly generous. SeaQuake showed the most support for the downtown programming we’re trying to create. Less money [spent] for beer means more money for downtown activities, which is what we’re tasked to do.”

AMS is chartered to serve a specific set of city blocks downtown, not the entire city or outlying areas. That area is the central Arcata business district, from Sixth to 12th streets between F and I streets, which includes no brewers from which to purchase beer directly.

AMS Executive Director Jeanette Todd declined to specify SeaQuake's exact offer, but said it was “double the donation” and contingent on exclusivity. “Basically they offered two times that much,” Todd said. “The more we fundraise, the less we have to ask from our members.”

“In no way are we trying to alienate or put a brewery in a negative light,” Joyce said. She said that there will be other events throughout the year in which AMS will seek the participation of area breweries.

AMS, which has programmed an unprecedented slate of new events and activities for the Plaza and environs, was recently granted an additional $33,000 by the City Council to fund downtown events, on top of its usual $15,000 annual stipend. It’s also rolling out a new, multi-tiered membership program after years of not charging any dues.

Maier sees it differently. “It doesn’t serve the community at large,” she said. “We’ve supported AMS for 15 years, through event donations, donations to vendors etc. We would have supported them through out all of their events in the same we always have and do for Eureka Main Street and chambers, groups tasked with similar missions. These relationships have to be symbiotic.”

Todd said the criticism is uncalled for. “It’s not normal to condemn a nonprofit for accepting a donation that suits their needs,” she said. “The whole idea behind asking for donations is for people to give because they believe in the work you do, or what service you provide.”

The bad blood between the two goes back to last year’s OysterFest, when AMS was reviled for choosing, along with Arcata-based Redwood Curtain Brewing Company and Sea-Quake Brewing, Petaluma-based Lagunitas Brewing Company, owned by beer behemoth Heinekin International, to pour there.

Maier said she’ll be pro-active in her response. “Six Rivers Brewery will seek out those non profits that benefit from Oysterfest funds and make donations to those groups directly,” she said. “We are here to support you and we appreciate the return of that support. Cheers!”

Matthew Wakefield, owner of Sea-Quake, described the varieties that will be available at the OysterFest. Space Sailor is “a great single hop” with Mosaic hops, 6.8 percent alcohol. Fog Line Pale Ale is a “hazy”-style pale ale with zero IBUs, and is thus hoppy with no bitterness, and 6 percent alcohol. The Blonde Ale is “light and flavorful,” and at 4.8 percent alcohol, “a great daytime beer.”

“Arcata Main Street is doing a great job,” Wakefield said. “This is our way of supporting them with a large donation to make the event successful.”

PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE Arcata’s new Public Safety Committee meets for the first time tonight, Wednesday, April 24 at 6 p.m. in City Council Chamber, 736 F St.

Agenda items for the initial meeting are largely technical, covering review of the Ralph M. Brown public meeting law; review of the Public Safety Task Force’s report; discussion of an appointment to the Plaza Improvement Task Force; deciding on a regular meeting time, day and location; and election of a chair and vice chair.

Members of the new committee are Anjali Browning (former chair of the Public Safety Task Force), Andrew Campbell, Lettie Dyer, Fred Johansen, Adrian Kamada, Melissa Lazon (former vice chair of the Public Safety Task Force), and Jesse Lopez. Arcata Police Chief Brian Ahearn serves as city staff liaison.

The committee will primarily focus on providing a public forum for the city, Arcata Police Department and community members to share their safety concerns and identify potential solutions. Committeemembers will research and evaluate crime trends and identify the highest risks to public safety and make recommendations to the City Council, city commissions and city staff regarding threats to public safety, crime reduction and prevention strategies based on their research and community outreach.

PUBLIC SAFETY SUNDAY The Humboldt County Sheriff’s Office and McKinleyville Chamber of Commerce present Public Safety Sunday, a chance for community members to get to know their local public safety agencies, view safety demonstrations and equipment, and learn more about how you can also play a big role in making the community safe. Public Safety Sunday takes place on April 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. at Pierson Park, 1608 Pickett Rd. in McKinleyville. The event will include displays and emergency equipment from over 20 agencies and businesses, with special events such as the California Highway Patrol and Coast Guard helicopter landings, and other safety demonstrations happening throughout the afternoon.

Village | New project approved in concept continually revised over the past year in response to suggestions and demands by community members and the council. It started as an 800-bed, student-only facility with a very different footprint, but has been downsized, moved farther away from the existing Westwood Village neighborhood and now includes open-market housing, and has no direct involvement by Humboldt State University.

The Village hearing began with a lengthy mea culpa by City Councilmember Susan Ornelas. Formerly an opponent of the project, Ornelas’s opposition softened somewhat at the previous council meeting, during which she said she could foresee approving a mixed-housing development with a cap of 602 occupants, but with 5 percent “flexibility” to allow up to 632 residents.

She expressed profound regret over her previous remarks about the 5 percent margin of flexibility to which she’d committed, saying that she now wished to stick to the 602-occupant limit.

Councilmembers Sofia Pereira and Paul Pitino support the 2019 version, even though they preferred the previous, 602-bed, student-only version that the council effectively denied with a tied vote last year.

Mayor Brett Watson, insisting on a 602-occupant limit, has repeatedly opposed the project, citing objections by neighbors and possible negative impacts on adjacent neighborhoods.

Councilmember Michael Winkler doesn’t participate in votes on The Village due to a private business relationship with AMCAL.

Attorney Tim Needham, representing Strombeck properties, delivered a letter objecting to a number of aspects of the city’s consideration of The Village as being unfair. One of them was a Land Use Code requirement that the project’s EIR be prepared by an independent CEQA expert, rather than one selected by the applicant.

Community Development Director David Loya said he would see that the EIR process would be handled in house or by independent consultants as the newly revised project goes forward.

Public testimony included Village backers and detractors. Several citizens said the project is needed to help relieve the housing shortage and to support Humboldt State University.

Others spoke in opposition, including boardmembers of Arcata Citizens for Responsible Housing (ACRH), which represent both citizens and real estate developers whom it refuses to disclose. The ACRH representatives again tried to steer the council toward a competing development for the Craftsman’s Mall site that it has lined up unidentified builders to create.

But the council resisted the objections and gave unanimous approval-in-concept to the mixed-use, 602-occupant Village project.

Field | Controversial but common herbicide

❖ FROM A1

Contacted on March 21, Sun Valley President and CEO Lane DeVries said the field “has not been treated with an orange substance of any kind.” Said DeVries, “This is a field that was ridged up last fall then seeded with grass to minimize erosion. The grass is now disintegrating after a weed killer was put on, a few weeks ago. Providing the weather cooperates we will commence planting Iris in several weeks. I hope this clarifies the situation.”

It did, except that he declined requests to identify any substances applied to the field, saying only, “We would love to explain and communicate with neighbors if any concerns arise, please forward my email or that of Tim Crockenberg, our Production manager to those that express concern or have questions.”

However, a Public Records Act filed with the Humboldt County Agricultural Commissioner eventually yielded the information.

According to official records, four acres at the site, named “Avila Field,” was treated on Feb. 22 by ground application of eight quarts of Ranger Pro Herbicide and PHT AD-Max 90, an adjuvant. A second eight-quart application of Ranger Pro was made on March 16.

Ranger Pro is a generic form of glyphosate, commonly known as Roundup. Its chemical name is (Carboxymethylamino) methylphosphonic Acid, molecular formula C₃H₈NO₅P. Herbicide adjuvants are substances added to improve herbicidal activity or application characteristics.

An extremely common herbicide first used in 1974, glyphosate, a non-selective herbicide prevents plants from making certain proteins that are needed for growth. Glyphosate stops a specific enzyme pathway necessary for plants and some microorganisms.

The household version is commonly used to kill weeds sprouting up in cracks in concrete, for example. On an industrial level, it is used to control broadleaf weeds and grasses on cultivated fields such as Sun Valley’s iris field. It is also used with some glyphosate-resistant (transgenic) and GMO (genetically modified organisms) crops, including canola, corn, cotton, soybeans, sugar beets and wheat.

Glyphosate is also controversial. On March 28, following a landmark court decision, California’s Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment (OEHHA) announced the addition glyphosate to the list of chemicals known to the state to cause cancer for purposes of Proposition 65.

A number of countries have banned glyphosate outright. Thousands of court cases are in progress, though some have been concluded. On March 27, a federal jury ordered Monsanto, its original manufacturer, to pay longtime Roundup user Edwin Hardeman, 70 and a victim of non-Hodgkin’s lymphoma, $80 million in damages.

The product’s defenders say the verdict is based on “junk science,” that it is safe when used as directed and that bans on its use will result in higher food prices and use of more toxic substances to accomplish the same results.

The Environmental Protection Agency issued a draft risk assessment for glyphosate in December, 2017, concluding that it is “not likely to be carcinogenic to humans. The agency’s assessment found no other meaningful risks to human health when the product is used according to the pesticide label.”

The United Nations has issued somewhat contradictory evaluations of glyphosate.

For perspective, local hardware stores carry products like Roundup for consumer use in abundant quantities, their shelves typically stocked with just as much or more than the six gallons of glyphosate and adjuvant used by Sun Valley.

DeVries confirmed that “we adhere and comply with state and federal laws” regarding the substance’s use.

County records indicate that notification of area schools is required. The field which was treated is not far from the Bloomfield School campus, home of Coastal Grove Charter School and Fuente Nueva Charter School. A Friday after noon call to the Arcata School District to confirm the notification was not immediately returned.

Stated DeVries: “We did notify the school before applying this material. Furthermore, a Humboldt County Agricultural Department inspector, accompanied by a visiting inspector from DPR [Department of Pesticide Regulation] were present at the onset of the application.”

place to visit and the dedicated birders that “pound the patches” to dig them out for others to enjoy. Sometimes, the birds attract people from out of the county or even out of state to come spend their ecotourism dollars here.

Teale describes the circumstances under which he found, identified, and reported the Wood Sandpiper thusly: “I stopped by the Russ Ranch Wetlands [formerly known as Centerville Wetlands] last September to look for Pectoral Sandpipers on the way back from a camping trip to the Redwood National Park area. Little did I know a Wood Sandpiper, which is rarely seen in the Americas, was waiting for me. In fact, I didn’t even know what a Wood Sandpiper was when I set out! But I noticed the subtly unusual bird with its bobbing tail, its striking white eyebrow (known as the supercilium), and its speckled back. Thankfully, the bird was calm enough to allow me to take a bunch of photos, staying put even when the rest of the sandpipers were flushed by a Peregrine Falcon. After much consultation on site with my handy copy of Sibley’s Guide to Western Birds, then more review back home, I was able to confirm that the bird was, in fact, a Wood Sandpiper.”

“I reported the bird through eBird [a self-reporting online data collection program of the Cornell Lab of Ornithology] as soon as I was able. I knew it was rare, as Sibley doesn’t even include a map for the species in his field guide. But I didn’t realize how rare it was until I got a message from [Humboldt County eBird reviewer] Rob Fowler the next day. Wood Sandpipers had only been reported in California two times previously!”

“Unfortunately, I wasn’t able to return to see it again, since I live in the Bay Area. But I was able to watch reports from the dozens of other folks that made it out to see the bird before it left, many traveling great distances to witness it. Some of my favorite comments include “Continuing rarity seen with many fellow birders. Lifer for all!” and “WOOD FREAKIN’ SANDPIPER.” Though I didn’t even know it existed before I found one, the Wood Sandpiper will always have a special place in my heart.”

The Wood Sandpiper stuck around for nine days, long enough that 67 observers filed eBird reports that included it. [Additional people who don’t eBird viewed the Wood Sandpiper as well.] Besides being a first Humboldt record and third State record, it represented a Life[time] Bird for many local birders.

The 2018 Runner-ups

On October 5, Mario Balitbit and Lizzie Feucht were birding those same Russ Ranch Wetlands outside Ferndale – where over 200 species have been reported on eBird – when they spotted a sandpiper that at first glance appeared to be a larger Western Sandpiper. Mario, a third-year wildlife student at Humboldt State, describes the process by which he and Lizzie finally determined that the bird was, in fact, a White-rumped Sandpiper. A first confirmed record for Humboldt, the species breeds in extreme northern Canada. This sighting garners second place for Bird of the Year.

But the wings weren’t right to be a Western, so the two next considered whether the shorebird could be a Pectoral Sandpiper. “The breast resembled a Pectoral, but with less uniform markings than expected. Posture and lack of tawny plumage to the overall bird did not suggest Pectoral.”

Mario and Lizzie then narrowed the choices down to Baird’s Sandpiper or White-rumped Sandpiper. They didn’t see any distinct brown scaling to the upper wing and back under limited light. The bill was clearly longer and slightly more curved than a typical Baird’s. Photos also revealed red coloration at the base of the lower bill, which would not be seen in a Baird’s. The shorebird also appeared higher off the ground than the nearby Baird’s but closer to the ground than a Pectoral.

“It was a fairly active falcon day, which pushed many of the shorebirds to move around, allowing clear views of the white rump (hint, hint). It was noticeably larger when flying with Least Sandpipers: similar in size and build to a Dunlin. Dunlin in flight look similar to a White-rumped Sandpiper due to their white outer tail feathers and flanks. This turned us in a loop when they would intermingle in flying flocks. After coming to this conclusion and bantering back and forth among different species, I just fell back onto the wetland with satisfaction and disbelief! The bird was a first County record for Humboldt and a Life Bird for both Lizzie and myself! Russ Ranch Wetlands are the bomb!”

The White-rumped Sandpiper was seen for the next week, garnering 27 eBird checklists.

McCown’s Longspur comes in third for 2018. This discovery again involved Mario Balitbit, who tells the tale in this fashion: “On October 16, my day started out chasing a Chestnut-collared Longspur within a fairly large flock of Lapland Longspurs on the V Street loop in the Arcata Bottoms. After finding the longspurs, I quickly returned to my classes at HSU. Later that day, I went back to do another loop around V Street. I relocated the Longspur flock and took some photos of a what I believed to be the same Chestnut-collared Longspur.”

THIRD PLACE McCown’s Longspur. PHOTO BY MARIO BALITBIT

“After I started sifting through my photos, I came to the realization that I actually had photographed a McCown’s Longspur!” Markings on the head resembled that of a juvenile House Sparrow: light pink bill, broad supercilium, no streaking, plus very faint, dull red on the wing, which were not seen well (if at all) in the field but showed up well in the photos. The most obvious indicator was a flight shot of black “T” trim on a primarily white tail.

Many people were able to observe the bird over the next few days, making it the first chase-able Humboldt record.

In fourth place is Gyrfalcon. It was glimpsed in the Arcata Bottom in the waning light of New Year’s Eve by Todd East-erla, a birder well known for his ability to travel to Humboldt and elsewhere and find birds of note. This large bird of prey stuck around for exactly three months, being last reported on March 31.

And the fifth place bird is Yellow-green Vireo, found by birding guide and eBird reviewer Rob Fowler. Here is how Rob describes his experience: “On October 4, I was on my usual dog walk around the Arcata Marsh Log Pond – which I was doing two to three times a week in 2018 – starting around 8:45 a.m.”

“As I walked up the path to the Interpretive Center, the second bird I saw in a big wax myrtle just north of the start of the path from the parking lot. I put my binoculars on it and was floored when I realized it was a long-billed vireo with bright yellow sides, green wings and back, and a light gray crown. It only took me a second to realize that it was a YELLOW-GREEN VIREO, the first one ever reported at the Arcata Marsh!”

“I quickly notified birders via Facebook Messenger and the Birdbox. I stayed with the bird for a couple of hours. I think more than 20 people saw the bird during the morning and a few more in the afternoon before losing track of it. Intensive searching the next day didn’t turn it up. The vireo was Humboldt County’s fifth record (maybe the first photo-documented one?) and the Arcata Marsh’s 335th bird species.”

[Note from selection committee member Tom Leskiw: The top two Humboldt birds in 2018 were shorebirds. Non-birders may wonder why birders would go to such great lengths to discover or see these birds, which in nonbreeding plumage may be drab and only subtly different. In his book, Living on the Wind, wildlife biologist/writer Scott Weidensaul captures well the excitement that birders feel when encountering these long-distance migrants: “Of course migration fascinates birders and ornithologists, but why would others be interested? Bird migration is the one truly unifying natural phenomenon in the world, stitching the continents together in a way that even the great weather systems, which roar out from the poles but fizzle at the equator, fail to do. It is an enormously complex subject, perhaps the most compelling drama in all of natural history.”]

HSU Journalism Dept. is ‘surprised and dismayed’ by KHSU firings, says it had no role in decisions

MAD RIVER UNION
HUMBOLDT STATE – HSU’s Journalism Department was, like others, taken by surprise by the administration’s abrupt purge. The department’s staff released this statement last week.

RE: KHSU Radio
TO: Humboldt State University and radio-listening community
FROM: HSU Department of Journalism and Mass Communication faculty
DATE: April 16, 2019
RE: KHSU Radio

We were surprised and dismayed at last week’s layoffs at KHSU radio station. Because students, alumni and community partners have asked, we would like to make it clear that our department was not involved in the university’s decision to fire the employees.

We are deeply concerned about the fate of KHSU, a National Public Radio affiliated station with a long history on our campus and in our community. We are also deeply concerned about the fate of Radio Bilingüe, now also silenced, which broadcasts the only locally-produced Spanish-language radio news programs in Humboldt County. The dismantling of KHSU abruptly ended a for-credit college course for senior journalism students at the station.

Still going strong is HSU’s KRFH student-run radio station, which broadcasts on a low-powered frequency at 105.1 FM and online at KRFH.net. KRFH offers student-crafted news weekdays at noon, 2, 4 and 6 p.m. during the semester. However, this is not the same type of programming as the content produced by professionals and community volunteers at KHSU.

It is important to distinguish between the KHSU community radio station located at the HSU campus Feuerwerker House and our student-run radio station KRFH in Gist Hall. KHSU began as student media 58 years ago, but over the decades, it matured into a professional NPR-affiliate station operated by staff and community volunteers.

KRFH radio station is completely managed and operated by HSU students. The Journalism Department oversees the student radio station in addition to a number of other student media organizations: The Lumberjack weekly newspaper, El Leñador monthly bilingual newspaper and Osprey magazine. While journalism faculty members advise these student media organizations, students control the content.

KHSU has served an important role on campus and throughout the county and has complemented our student-run media. Our journalism students benefited from the opportunity to move from their training ground in the KRFH radio booth to work at KHSU under the experienced guidance and mentorship of the paid staff and community volunteers. Several journalism alumni work at radio stations across the country because of the combined experience they acquired at both KRFH and KHSU radio stations.

Having two stations on one campus, a professional community station and a student-run station, has distinguished Humboldt State from other campuses in the Cal State system and around the country.

We hope this clears up any confusion over the connection between KHSU and our student radio station KRFH.

We are strong supporters of local media, and it is our hope that out of the current turmoil, a strong community-run station will rise.

MAD RIVER UNION
EUREKA – Former KHSU volunteers, many still in mourning following the sudden dismantling of their beloved radio station, are now looking at alternative forms of community radio.

Five former KHSU volunteers attended the April 18 meeting of the KEET-TV Board of Directors and asked the PBS station to consider creating a community radio station.

KEET Executive Director David Gordon told the former volunteers that he wanted them to have an opportunity to talk to the board. As the future of local radio, Gordon said it was unknown. “We don’t have any answers. Nobody does at this point,” Gordon said.

Emotions at the meeting were still raw, with KHSU having been gutted just a week before.

“My commentary is not about anger, though I’m very angry,” said Halimah Collingwood, who was a 30-year volunteer with KHSU, 27 of those putting on her music program Ethic Excursions. “I’m not here to talk about the devastation that the staff and the volunteers feel, but I’m very, very sad. I’m very upset with the way they’ve been treated... the way they disrespected us.”

“Suddenly, it’s gone,” Collingwood said about KHSU.

Almost all of the station’s staff were abruptly laid off on April 11 and all of the volunteers were dismissed. The station now carries a feed from North State Radio out of Chico. Among the reasons given for the closure by HSU administrators was cost savings.

“This is the time for our community to get together,” said Collingwood, who suggested that KEET consider expanding into radio.

Former KHSU volunteer Kathleen Marshall echoed Collingwood’s concerns. “Obviously, I feel gutted,” Marshall said.

She also encouraged KEET to expand into radio.

“It’s a complicated process,” Marshall said. “It’s going to take a lot of money, a long time and a major commitment.”

Former KHSU DJ and volunteer Brian Curtis also supported the idea. “People are very eager to seek alternative homes and paths forward for the KHSU family and for continuing to have quality public radio on the North Coast.”

KEET Board President Paul McNally said the board would take the comments under consideration. “We too have been surprised, and maybe a better word is really shocked, at what has happened,” McNally said.

As the KEET directors were wrapping up their meeting April 18, a special program about the demise of KHSU was being livestreamed on YouTube. The show, North Coast Perspectives, was hosted by KEET and featured host James Falk talking with former KHSU Underwriter Coordinator Jeff DeMark, former KHSU volunteer Jana Kirk-Levine and longtime KHSU supporter Phil Ricord, who owns Wildberries Marketplace.

The show can be viewed at youtu.be/hQxnh53xXJY.

Re: KHSU Shut Down
Dear Chancellor White,

We are writing today out of grave concern for the way our local community radio station, KHSU, was shut down and abandoned by Humboldt State’s executive leadership. The shutdown occurred on a Friday, with police on scene, and zero notice given to employees and volunteers who were terminated or to the thousands of listeners who depend on the station every single day. The way this went down was completely avoidable and a slap in the face to Humboldt County and the North Coast.

For generations, the people of Humboldt have relied on the dulcet voices of long-experienced local broadcasters and first-timers alike. Time and again our community rallied around this station to preserve its mission of being a community gathering grounds for diverse voices, debate and the latest news from across the North Coast.

Just last week KHSU concluded a successful community fundraising drive, where local businesses and residents put their priorities and names on the line to support the station and their award winning programing. The reckless manner and timing of HSU shutting down this amazing station could not have been worse and it’s time for the long-term decision making by a short-term administration to stop.

Major decisions made behind closed doors, and with zero transparency, simply do not work for this community. It hurts the credibility of the University and makes everyone’s job harder (especially the incoming President). There was absolutely no reason for this situation to unfold as it has and we want it to stop.

We are formally requesting your office take action on the following:

Do not make any further moves with KHSU until the new administration has been installed. Specifically, immediately cease any effort to abandon, sell, transfer, or contract out KHSU until the new administration has reviewed any and all plans. And the community must be involved in any future dialogue with the station. KHSU goes far beyond being a University asset and should not be evaluated and disposed of without community input.

Require that any further decisions by the next administration be made with community transparency and respect.

Transparency is the foundation of any successful government. If you lead with openness and respect, the community will be with you.

Thank you for your consideration of this request and we look forward to talking with you very soon about this important issue.

Warmest Regards,
Mike McGuire, Senator 2nd District; Jim Wood, Assemblymember 2nd Wes Chesbro, Former Senator; Patty Berg, Former Assemblymember

KHSU | Administration’s clumsy handling of station purge strongly condemned passed a “sense of the Senate Resolution” rejecting and condemning the administration’s action to eliminate KHSU’s staff and local programming. Seven percent of the senate opposed the resolution; 18 percent abstained.

A draft resolution, which was amended, asks California State University Chancellor Tim White to reinstate the station’s staff and reverse related budgetary decisions. It further asks that a shared governance process be established for future decisions affecting public radio.

At the request of senators, additional points were added opposing sale of station assets, including the music library; that access to contributors’ archived work be restored; and that the resolution be sent directly to Chancellor White and the CSU Board of Trustees.

Neither President Lisa Rossbacher nor Vice President Craig Wruck, who participated in the decision to fire the KHSU staff, were present.

During the 15-minute period set aside for community comment, Department Chair and Professor John Meyer lamented that the University Senate, which he called “the primary policy recommending policy for the entire university.”

“As best as I’ve been able to determine, neither you nor your leadership were involved with this decision, or consulted about it, nor even consulted in advance of it,” Meyer said.

The administration action violated a range of supposed core principles, he said. Meyer noted that while the administration cited budgetary pressure as a reason for the abrupt changes at the radio station, the University Budget and Planning Committee wasn’t consulted either.

Meyer said the administration’s actions didn’t consider the university’s Strategic Plan, a principal goal of which is to “strengthen partnerships with the local community,” “was clearly not a factor in this decision.”

And while greater student involvement in the station was cited as a justification by the administration, it didn’t consult with the Journalism and Mass Communication Department in formulating the action.

He said that while the administration may try to spin the actions as a misunderstanding and overreaction, “If any of this fallout has taken these decisionmakers by surprise, I’d argue that this too is a failure to respect the processes of shared governance or even minimal consultation.”

The decision by HSU President Lisa Rossbacher and Vice President Craig Wruck, was made, Meyer pointed out, “by two individuals who very soon have no decisionmaking authority or responsibility at this university at all. That alone is reason enough to challenge it.”

James Floss, a lecturer in the Department of Communication, was bitter about the scrubbing of contributor’s archived work from KHSU’s website. He called that “a malicious act” and possibly illegal..

“What happened was wrong!” Floss said. “Really wrong... Harm was done to people who have been a part of this university for a very long time.”

He’d created a body of work around his show, Immigrant Voices: Documenting the Undocumented, which he said formed his legacy at the university. “I had 18 students working on it, so don’t tell me this is about student involvement,” he said. “I cost the station nothing with what I was doing.”

Floss then recited an original poem he’d composed regarding the dismantling of KHSU, titled Radiocide (which is readable at madriverunion.com).

Former KHSU Magazine host Brian Curtis called the station purge “an abrupt and seemingly vindictive decision.” He said the station archives are inaccessible to their creators, and that station staff can’t get to their personal belongings.

“What is doubly frustrating is that so much of this seems almost punitive in nature,” and that “the staff and volunteers are being punished in a way for the incompetence of our leadership.”

A turning point, he said, was the termination of Operations Director Katie Whiteside, which undermined fundraising. “It was cited as though it was our fault... for these budget shortcomings,” he said.

He faulted Rossbacher for sidelining – “attempting to silence,” as he put it – the station’s Community Advisory Board. That was done by removing meeting notices from the KHSU website and not reserving university facilities for meeting space as had traditionally been done.

Curtis noted that the suspension of the CAB came “shortly after they’d been taken with coming up with a new Mission and Visioning [sic] statement for the station.” He said the administration then cited the CAB’s not working on the statement had been cited as a “strike against them,” implying that it was due to the administration’s CAB-suppressing actions.

However, the CAB had roundly rejected Wruck’s invitation to help formulate a Mission and Vision Statement, prior to – not after – being disenfranchised by the administration.

[CAB members have said that the group was internally divided over the bid to have it assist with the Mission and Vision Statement, and along gender lines. Male members were generally in favor of cooperating in the process, while female members opposed Wruck’s outreach as insincere.]

Curtis also noted that the station purge took place four days after the Spring Pledge Drive, after which the university “effectively took the money and ran.”

He called the actions “a huge breach of trust with the community.”

Former Underwriting Coordinator Jeff DeMark, a 17-year KHSU employee, elaborated on the funding situation.

“It’s been a deep honor to serve the community,” he said. “I was thinking it was going to last a little longer, before we were so rudely interrupted last week.”

He said he’d confronted Wruck about accepting pledges and then suddenly dismantling the station. “You knew this was ending,” he said he asked Wruck. “How do you justify that?” He said Wruck told him, “They can ask for their money back.” “I said, ‘Well, that is not honest. You know better than that.’”

DeMark said Wruck, who serves as vice president for Advancement, is “a national expert on philanthropy.” Philanthropy, he said is “based on mutual trust and personal relationships,” but that “this has sundered many relationships with personal people and underwriters. They’re all quitting. What can possible happen now but basically to sell the license.”

He referred to the “lack of community support” cited by the administration as a situation it had itself created, beginning with the termination of Whiteside. “The reason we lost community support when they fired Katie, and how it was done,” DeMark said. “I lost $45,000 in underwriting in the first two months. Then we lost $45,000 to $50,000 in membership, and it has not gotten better. They have made no effort to really bridge this.”

DeMark said he raised $3.5 million for the station over 17 years, and that it all went directly into content creation for listeners, and “trying to connect communities.”

Sociology Professor Josh Meisel likened the gutting of KHSU to “what Parisians are experiencing – a cultural institution burned to the ground.”

He called the inaccessibility of the station’s archives as “shameful.”

“I am totally ashamed of the decisionmaking process and I think we owe it to the community to rebuild,” Meisel said. Employees had been “rudely and inhumanely” cut off from the work of their careers, and that “essential” community trust had been shattered.

Connie Stewart, executive director of the California Center for Rural Policy, said the KHSU imbroglio is undermining her efforts to raise funds for the recently announced restoration of HSU’s nursing program. Some of the potential funders are among those who have withdrawn support for KHSU over the administration’s actions.

“They’re connected,” she said. “It’s rough... This has shaken people, and shaken me.”

Professor of Politics and University Senator Noah Zerbe said the administration’s action “flies in the face of shared governance.” He said that the closure of the university’s football program was the result of a two-year process involving conversation, consultation with the community. “Even if you disagreed with that decision, at least the process was clear,” he said. “No one was surprised when football was cut... This feels very different to me. This feels, ‘Wait, what?’”

“It really sets back our relationship with the community in ways that are incredibly painful,” Zerbe said. “Even in the best case, it’s going to take years to recover from.”

The value of KHSU’s broadcast license is according to another speaker, just $100,000 to $250,000.

After more discussion, the draft resolution was amended to urge that archives be restored, that no sale of station assets be made and that the document be sent immediately to CSU Chancellor Tim White and the CSU Board of Trustees.”

The resolution passed by a 75 percent majority, with the final version and individual vote tally released the next day (review these documents at madriverunion.com).

KHSU action and acknowledgement

My feelings about the disembowelment of KHSU have been articulated eloquently, knowledgeably and passionately by letters that have appeared in the opinion pages of the Mad River Union, the North Coast Journal and the Times-Standard.

I'd like to thank everyone for expressing their dismay, anger and frustration about the decimation of KHSU on these pages. In addition to writing letters to the editor

I encourage former staff, volunteers and supporters to send copies of those letters, along with articles from our local press to the CSU Chancellor:

400 Golden Shore
Long Beach, CA 90802

In addition, send copies of your letter to each member of the CSU Board of Trustees:

c/o Trustee Secretariat
400 Golden Shore
Long Beach, CA 90802

A full list of their names can be found at calstate.edu/csu-system/board-of-trustees/Pages/address-list.aspx.

Ex Officio Trustees should also be included in your letter writing. They include Governor Gavin Newsom, Lieutenant Governor Eleni Kounalakis, Speaker of the Assembly Anthony Rendon, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tony K. Thurmond. Those addresses can also be found at the above-referenced URL.

I would also like to thank Phil Ricord for including as many staff, volunteers and supporters in his In Memoriam RIP KHSU page as could possibly fit.

As a former executive producer, host, engineer and editor for Through the Eyes of Women (TTEOW), I would also like to acknowledge the work of the extraordinary women who kept TTEOW on the air for 34+ years. It's origins began as the brainchild of Ruth Mountaingrove, Ina Harris, Bel Shalom and engineer Stacey Aspey. Volunteers through the years included Kathy Sarabian, Geraldine Goldberg, Maria Bartlett, Lynette Mullen, Heather Rawson, Lynette Nutter, Geneva Peppars, Brenda Starr, Danielle Orr, Amy Jester, Emma Breacain and Corinne Frugoni.

I personally am especially grateful to Beth Rogers who taught me to engineer, edit and then passed me the reins as executive producer. In addition, TTEOW benefited greatly from the support of former KHSU staff members Katie Whiteside, Jessica Eden and Lorna Bryant (who was also a TTEOW Host). These are just of few of the remarkable women of TTEOW.

I'm sure there are more whom I did not name. Please forgive any omissions due to my own lack of knowledge.

From its humble beginnings with archives on cassette tapes TTEOW grew to include a regular blog, khsuwomen.wordpress.com. Many interviews from Barbara Kingsolver to Cassandra Hesseltine, from Elizabeth Berrien to Anjelique Kidjo, from Green Burial to the Green New Deal can be found, and listened to, on the blog.

I am hoping to find ways through the current chaos to grow strong community radio and continue to serve our beloved North Coast.

All the best,
Kathleen Marshall, BSRN

KHSU wasn't diverse

I am sure I am not alone, when I say I am already sick of hearing people whine and carry signs saying things like "I do not consent," in reaction to the cutbacks at KHSU.

Indeed, it was KHSU's hatred and intolerance of ideological diversity that limited its financial support from the community. I'm sure that few of the left wing extremists who loved KHSU would agree, but I can tell you that if you weren't left-wing extremist, KHSU was very difficult to listen to when they weren't playing music.

I find it ridiculous when I hear the protesters blame the HSU leadership. In addition to a lack of financial support from the community, there are state budget cuts to HSU.

This would never happen if people weren't electing politicians who overspend. If they didn't overspend in the first place, there would be no need for budget cuts.

The fact is, when California was a consistently red state, higher education was free. Without overspending there was plenty of money for free college. Up until 1975 all California State Universities were 100 percent tuition free. There was also no problem finding money for a football team and radio station.

From my point of view, the protesters are part of the problem.

An outrageous loss

Many in our North Coast communities are justifiably outraged at the loss to the community caused by HSU's gutting of local radio station KHSU, not to mention the associated staffing and volunteer purge.

The loss is particularly keenly felt among the nonprofit community, which has long had a mutually beneficial relationship with the radio station. Nonprofit organizations fill in the gaps for human services, the arts and humanities, and protecting the environment in rural communities, and this is especially true behind the Redwood Curtain.

KHSU has been a key partner in promoting the events and other activities by regional non-profits, many of which have reciprocated over the years by pitching during pledge drives. This is what community is all about.

For us at the Arcata Playhouse, the recent sold-out performances of Kannapolis and A Woman's Place is in Her Home owe a huge debt of gratitude to KHSU for the airing, posting, and streaming of interviews with Jackie Dandeneau, David Ferney, Jenny Scheinman and other art-

Rename McKinleyville 'Ocean Bluffs'

I am writing in response to the April 17 letter to the editor by Barbara Morrison regarding re-naming McKinleyville. In short, I agree with Morrison completely.

I feel happy and fortunate to be a resident of McKinleyville. Yet whenever the topic of McKinleyville comes up in conversation with those living in surrounding towns, faces sour and the most common refrain is "Ugh. I wouldn't want to live there." The unfortunate "Oklahoma By The Sea" moniker is often brought up with a sneer.

It is far past time to put our best foot forward by updating and upgrading the name for this beautiful spot on the planet.

The two most outstanding natural features of this area are the magnificent views of the ocean, as Morrison noted, and the bluffs that facilitate these views. Therefore, I suggest the name of "Ocean Bluffs" for what is currently known as McKinleyville.

That there are people looking to incorporate this area as a city is very exciting. This poses an excellent opportunity to taking proper care of wild animals. I invite anyone who is interested in actually learning how these roadside circuses treat their animals to search the Internet, as I did.

I want to urge all people in Humboldt County who have compassion and empathy for other living creatures to avoid this event. Please do not fund animal abuse and imprisonment.

These poor creatures are shoved in hot trucks 32 weeks out of the year. They are forced to "perform" in over 200 towns in 17 different states, according to the circus' website. We need to teach our children that cruelty is not entertainment.

There is a sanctuary in Tampa, Florida that is called Big Cat Sanctuary. It takes abused circus cats such as Francis and Delilah (captives of Culpepper and Merriweather Circus) and gives them a comfortable, humane retirement.

I urge Mr. Eugene "Trey" Key, III who "owns" these two beautiful creatures, to retire them and let them live the rest of their lives in peace and comfort.

Sincerely,
Mara Parker

Princess is part of a bigger cruelty picture

The kidnap and killing of Princess "touched hearts and sparked outrage around the world thanks to widespread media coverage." Really?

Don't get me wrong; if somebody kidnapped and butchered my dog that I love, I too would feel grief and anger. But the fact that "media" took the nefarious death of a pet pig and was able to run with it world wide, speaks to how jaded we have become to wide suffering and even torture of human beings in our world every day or even in our county.

Not to mention the fate of pigs in the industrial pork farms that are well documented for their tortuous treatment of these animals.

A low-IQ Bohnhead

In the words of Humboldt County Supervisor Rex Bohn's political cult leader, Donald Trump, Supervisor Bohn is "a low-IQ individual."

I'm not saying Rex Bohn is stupid because Bohn is a redneck Republican right-wing rube. I'm saying Supervisor Bohn is stupid because he has a long personal and public history of being a conservative bigoted idiot. Bohn is brainless!

For instance, the following is an excerpt from the Nov. 7, 2013 edition of the Ferndale Enterprise about a public event Rex Bohn attended that included performers in blackface:

"...First District Supervisor rex bohn, who attended the event and conducted a live auction, said he thought the performance was "pretty amusing. I can see people's point, but it didn't offend me," Bohn said.

Blackface didn't offend Supervisor Bohn? No, in fact, according to his own words, Rex Bohn finds blackface to be "pretty amusing." What an idiot!

On March 4 of this year, at another public event where Bohn was acting as an auctioneer – what kind of function was it, a slave auction? – racist Rex Bohn asked, "Is it so authentic that we're going to want to go steal hubcaps after we eat?" in reference to a home-cooked Mexican dinner up for sale, according to an April 14, 2019 North Coast Journal article.

Rex Bohn's racist aspersions insinuating people of Mexican descent are criminals by virtue of their culture merely confirms the well-documented fact that Rex "Blackface" Bohn is a mindless moron!

And where does one even begin with the incredible irony of holier-than-thou hypocrite Rex Bohn categorizing all Mexicans as criminals, considering Supervisor Bohn's sone Trevor Bohn's infamous arrest by the Fortuna Police Department "...on suspicion of burglary, felony child abuse, kidnapping, assault with a deadly weapon and false imprisonment..." detailed in the Sept. 20, 2012 edition of the North Coast Journal.

In response to his then 27-year-old son Trevor Bohn's arrest in 2012, Humboldt County Supervisor Rex Bohn issued the following statement to the NCJ: "I am certainly pleased there were no guns involved." (Or hubcaps, or Mexican food, apparently!)"

Rex Bohn is simply too stupid and racist to be in the position of supervising anyone in Humboldt County. Bohn should resign from the Board of Supervisors immediately! Failing that, Supervisor Bohn should bring his reprehensible right-wing reelection campaign to a close. Wrap it up, B!

Defunct Public Radio

ists. Volunteer show hosts like Russ Cole, Michael Eldredge and Halimah Collingwood have always taken the time to feature the music of artists appearing at local venues, raising interest and increasing audiences for those artists.

More important than ticket sales, however, has been the impact of public affairs programming like Through the Eyes of Women, Artuaves, and The KHSU Magazine on community awareness and education. Experienced program hosts conducted in-depth interviews that delivered relevant information to an appreciative audience. The volunteers, staff, and producers worked together as a team to create radio about our community for the North Coast and beyond.

How ironic it is that April is National Volunteer Month.

The shuttering of live community-oriented programming at KHSU is an incalculable loss to our community and the non-profits that serve Humboldt and Del Norte counties.

Rat radar flashing red

Thanks to Phil Record for the full page memorial for KHSU. The sad thing is that so many current and past names were not in print. KHSU volunteers past and present could fill a telephone book!

I believe this outcome, the demise of KHSU was done behind closed doors, over a period of time. I keep wondering where this all came from. I smell a rat. I contend that an employee at advancement, under Wruck, had Wruck's ear. Wruck knows nothing about radio, so where did this ill conceived idea come from?

I look to see who has spoken up and who has not. The rat has been silent.

I would encourage local reporters to seek FOIA info regarding all email communication on this matter. Just a thought.

Commission supports leaving Town Center planning to McKinleyville

Daniel Mintz
MAD RIVER UNION

Humboldt County planning commissioners debated aspects of a zoning category that will apply to McKinleyville's Town Center but agreed to defer to an upcoming community-driven process.

Commissioners also voted to recommend that a new timberland category not be adopted by the Board of Supervisors due to doubts about increased residential entitlements.

Those actions stemmed from the Planning Commission's review of General Plan zoning text amendments at its April 18 meeting. One of the more heavily-discussed items was the new Mixed Use (MU) zoning for urban areas, which will be used in McKinleyville's planned Town Center.

The Town Center's boundaries run from Pierson Park to McKinleyville Avenue and from Railroad Drive to just south of Hiller Road. The center also includes the commercial area north of Heartwood Drive.

The MU designation intends to create town centers that mix urban-scale housing with a variety of commercial and business uses in a pedestrian-friendly setting. Senior Planner Michael Richardson described some of the ways that's done, including using the same parking spaces for residential use after business hours and commercial use during the day.

But during a public comment session, Colin Fiske of the Coalition for Responsible Transportation Priorities said the MU zone's level of parking and setbacks offset its goals.

"In large part, it would not be possible to have a dense and pedestrian-oriented streetscape by following these parking and setback standards," he continued. "It would force development to be much lower density and more car-oriented."

McKinleyville resident Bonnie McGregor told commissioners that developing a town center ordinance – a process that's supposed to begin this summer – has long been considered the mechanism for defining development standards.

She noted that the McKinleyville Municipal Advisory Committee (McKMAC) has asked the county to use the ordinance process for decision-making. "People have waited 22 years for these ordinances to be developed and we're just about to get there," McGregor said.

Commissioner nevertheless debated the parking aspect, with Richardson noting that some cities are "going big" with parking reductions. "I'm not exactly sure what the appropriate fit is in McKinleyville – We're hoping the McKMAC will be able to help us figure that out," he said.

Commissioner Melanie McCavour said that if alternative transportation and public transit are to be encouraged, then use of cars has to be controlled through measures such as reducing parking opportunities.

Planning Director John Ford said that "if we're going to engage in social engineering, it has to be a reduction with a corresponding replacement," such as enhanced multi-modal transportation.

Commissioner Peggy O'Neill, a McKinleyville resident, said reduced parking "sounds really good" but vehicle use has to be planned for because McKinleyville exists within a rural area. "We're not all going to jump on the bus," she said.

Commissioner Brian Mitchell, also a resident of McKinleyville, said various ideas on parking and other aspects "can be customized to fit the needs of the community" through community-based planning.

Commissioners agreed to recommend approval of the MU zoning text but to allow communities to tailor the standards.

Also reviewed was the new Timber-Exclusive (TE) category, which would be applied to the county's large volume of lands zoned as Unclassified.

Two issues emerged as problematic with it – its allowance for single family home construction and its 40-acre minimum parcel size.

McKinleyville resident Nancy Correll said a trend of increased fire risk and the impacts of residential development make home construction questionable.

"We don't know what it's going to be like out there in the future, whether we're going to have more problems with floods or with dry seasons and fires," she continued.

Joyce King, also of McKinleyville, discouraged adoption of the TE zone in the face of a "biodiversity emergency bearing down on us."

Asked how unclassified parcels would be zoned if not TE, County Planner John Miller said they'd be zoned as Agriculture-Exclusive. That zoning has a 60-acre minimum parcel size but would allow cannabis cultivation, which commissioners are wary of in timberland areas.

But they agreed to recommend that the Board of Supervisors not adopt the TE zoning text. A Planned Rural Development zoning category, which clusters residential development to preserve greenbelts, was endorsed by commissioners.

The rezoning hearing will continue on May 2, when the Agriculture-Exclusive and other categories will be reviewed.

Bohn | Invited to attend monthly 'white fragility group' month, community organizer Renee Saucedo released a statement on it demanding Bohn's resignation.

A rally preceded the supervisors meeting and many of its participants were in board chambers.

During an open public comment session, Saucedo warned that use of language has social influence.

"An elected official made a joke about Mexicans stealing hubcaps – reinforcing the stereotype that Mexicans are generally criminals, gang members," she said. "Why are comments like this exceedingly dangerous, supervisors? Because language, especially from public officials, becomes part of the local culture, which leads to discriminatory practices and policies."

Other commenters described Bohn's jocular allusion to criminal behavior as "extremely divisive," "appalling" and "hurtful."

Some spoke of the pervasiveness of racism and "white privilege." An Arcata resident presented Bohn with a copy of the book White Fragility, whose subtitle is "Why it's so hard for white people to talk about racism."

Other speakers linked the situation to what they described as Humboldt's generally racist social environment and the unprosecuted killing of Humboldt State University student Josiah Lawson.

"I come to you right now as a black man in Humboldt County and there hasn't been a moment where I felt safe," said HSU student Isaiah Alexander.

He added that to uphold standards of integrity and character for county leadership, Bohn should make "a very, very, very difficult decision" and resign.

"I'm saying that because I don't trust you, I don't trust anyone here," he continued as applause sounded. "I'm saying this because this is real. People like me are being attacked, people like me are dying and if you're not going to do anything about it -- then just get out of the way."

Meg Stofsky, a member of the local NAACP branch, challenged Bohn to confront the import of his remark.

"You used your white privilege, you thought you weren't going to be heard -- but we're listening," she said. "We understand where that came from, we're in a white racist society. We can't help that but we can help what's in our hearts and what comes out of our mouths."

Stofsky invited Bohn to join a "white fragility group" that meets monthly so that he can "come and explore how you have been infected" and allow his constituents to have "what they need – someone who isn't blatantly racist."

A member of the NAACP's Legal Redress Committee that fields reports of discrimination, Stofsky described Humboldt County as "a racist society that lets black and brown people die on the streets."

Kelsey Reedy, who chairs the county's Green Party, said that racism holds sway in the county, even within HSU.

OBITUARY

Daniel Lee Cobb
Jan. 22, 1954 - March 29, 2019

Daniel Lee Cobb, age 65, passed away on March 29, 2019, at his residence in Eureka, Calif. His death was sudden and believed to be caused by issues with his heart.

Dan was born on Jan. 22, 1954, in Tulare, Calif., to his parents, Henry (“Bud”) and Betty Cobb (Foster), who preceded him in death. Dan has two surviving siblings, Terry Cobb and Marie Roberts (Cobb). At a young age, Dan’s family moved to Trinity County, where he attended Trinity High School in Weaver-ville. He married his high school sweetheart, Jodie Bell, at an early age and proceeded to have four children whom he loved very much, (oldest to youngest) Jason, Matthew, Miranda and Jesse.

Dan was an extremely smart and hardworking man and did everything he could to provide for his family. He attended AAI (Arizona Automotive Institute) trade school in Arizona to better himself and his family. He worked for over 13 years at Northwood Chevrolet in Eureka, doing what he loved to do.

Later in life, Dan became remarried and became a parent to his adopted daughter, Peggy, who he loved like his own from day one.

Once he became disabled, he enjoyed spending time with his grandchildren, Joseph, Kiara, Dameyon, Alice, Titus and Tiana.

He also enjoyed coaching Little League and was an avid video gamer/computer technician. He was a sci-fi lover and sword collector. His favorite TV series was Highlander.

Dan became a part of many people’s lives due to his kind spirit and loving ways. He was an honest man who would give you the shirt off his back and not expect anything in return.

Dan loved cars, being outdoors, guns, barbecuing, and spending time with family. He was always a joker and his squinty blue eyes would smile when he laughed. He will be missed dearly by all who knew and loved him.

A Celebration of Life BBQ will be held at a location and time to be determined.

“There can be only one.”
– Kurgan (Highlander)
“I’ll give you my gun when you pry it from my cold, dead hands.”

You have 30 calendar days after this Summons and Petition are served on you to file a Response (form FL-120) at the court and have a copy served on the petitioner. A letter, phone call, or court appearance will not protect you. If you do not file your Response on time, the court may make orders affecting your marriage or domestic partnership, your property, and custody of your children. You may be ordered to pay support and attorney fees and costs. For legal advice, contact a lawyer immediately. Get help finding a lawyer at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp), at the California Legal Services website (www.lawhelpca.org), or by contacting your local county bar association. Tiene 30 días de calendario después de haber recibido la entrega legal de esta Citación y Petición para presentar una Respuesta (formulario FL-120) ante la corte y efectuar la entrega legal de una copia al demandante. Una carta o llamada telefónica o una audiencia de la corte no basta para protegerlo. Si no presenta su Respuesta a tiempo, la corte puede dar órdenes que afecten su matrimonio o pareja de hecho, sus bienes y la custodia de sus hijos. La corte también le puede ordenar que pague manutención, y honorarios y costos legales. Para asesoramiento legal, póngase en contacto de inmediato con un abogado. STANDARD FAMILY LAW RE-TRAINING ORDERS
Starting immediately, you and your spouse or domestic partner are restrained from:

1. removing the minor children of the parties from the state or applying for a new or replacement passport for those minor children without the prior written consent of the other party or an order of the court;
2. cashing, borrowing against, canceling, transferring, disposing of, or changing the beneficiaries of any insurance or other coverage, including life, health, automobile, and disability, held for the benefit of the parties and their minor children;
3. transferring, encumbering, hypothecating, concealing, or in any way disposing of any property, real or personal, whether community, quasi-community, or separate, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life; and
4. creating a nonprobate transfer or modifying a nonprobate transfer in a manner that affects the disposition of property subject to the transfer, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court. Before revocation of a nonprobate transfer can take effect or a right of survivorship to property can be eliminated, notice of the change must be filed and served on the other party.
You must notify each other of any proposed extraordinary expenditures at least five business days prior to incurring these extraordinary expenditures and account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after these restraining orders are effective. However, you may use community property, quasi-community property, or your own separate property to pay an attorney to help you or to pay court costs.

NOTICE—ACCESS TO AFFORDABLE HEALTH INSURANCE: Do you or someone in your household need affordable health insurance? If so, you should apply for Covered California. Covered California can help reduce the cost you pay towards high quality affordable health care. For more information, visit www.coveredca.com. Or call Covered California at 1-800-300-1506.
WARNING—IMPORTANT INFORMATION California law provides that, for purposes of division of property upon dissolution of a marriage or domestic partnership or upon legal separation, property acquired by the parties during marriage or domestic partnership in joint form is presumed to be community property. If either party to this action should die before the jointly held community property is divided, the language in the deed that characterizes how title is held (i.e., joint tenancy, tenants in common, or community property) will be controlling, and not the community property presumption. You should consult your attorney if you want the community property presumption to be written into the recorded title to the property.
ÓRDENES DE RESTRICCIÓN ESTÁNDAR DE DERECHO FAMILIAR
En forma inmediata, usted y su cónyuge o pareja de hecho tienen prohibido:

1. llevarse del estado de California a los hijos menores de las partes, o solicitar un pasaporte nuevo o de repuesto para los hijos menores, sin el consentimiento previo por escrito de la otra parte o sin una orden de la corte;
2. cobrar, pedir prestado, cancelar, transferir, desahacerse o cambiar el nombre de los beneficiarios de cualquier seguro u otro tipo de cobertura, como de vida, salud, vehículo y discapacidad, que tenga como beneficiario(s) a las partes y su(s) hijo(s) menor(es);
3. transferir, gravar, hipotecar, ocultar o deshacerse de cualquier manera de cualquier propiedad, inmueble o personal, ya sea comunitaria, cuasicomunitaria o separada, sin el consentimiento escrito de la otra parte o una orden de la corte, excepto en el curso habitual de actividades personales y comerciales o para satisfacer las necesidades de la vida; y
4. crear o modificar una transferencia no testamentaria de manera que afecte la asignación de una propiedad sujeta a transferencia, sin el consentimiento por escrito de la otra parte o una orden de la corte. Antes de que se pueda eliminar la revocación de una transferencia no testamentaria, se debe presentar ante la corte un aviso del cambio y hacer una entrega legal de dicho aviso a la otra parte. Cada parte tiene que notificar a la otra sobre cualquier gasto extraordinario propuesto por lo menos cinco días hábiles antes de realizarlo, y rendir cuenta a la corte de todos los gastos extraordinarios realizados después de que estas órdenes de restricción hayan entrado en vigencia. No obstante, puede usar propiedad comunitaria, cuasicomunitaria o suya separada para pagar a un abogado que lo ayude o para pagar los costos de la corte.
AVISO—ACCESO A SEGURO DE SALUD MÁS ECONÓMICO: ¿Necesita seguro de salud a un costo asequible, ya sea para usted o alguien en su hogar? Si es así, puede presentar una solicitud con Covered California. Covered California lo puede ayudar a reducir el costo que paga por seguro de salud asequible y de alta calidad. Para obtener más información, visite www.coveredca.com. O llame a Covered California al 1-800-300-0213.
ADVERTENCIA—INFORMACIÓN IMPORTANTE
De acuerdo a la ley de California, las propiedades adquiridas por las partes durante su matrimonio o pareja de hecho en forma conjunta se consideran propiedad comunitaria para fines de la división de bienes que ocurre cuando se produce una disolución o separación legal del matrimonio o pareja de hecho. Si cualquiera de las partes de este caso llega a fallecer antes de que se divida la propiedad comunitaria de tenencia conjunta, el destino de la misma quedará determinado por las cláusulas de la escritura correspondiente que describen su tenencia (por ej., tenencia conjunta, tenencia en común o propiedad comunitaria) y no por la presunción de propiedad comunitaria. Si quiere que la presunción comunitaria quede registrada en la escritura de la propiedad, debería consultar con un abogado.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.allsource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2018-02994-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

Super Nova plays with toys, but doesn't destroy them

Sometimes we are contacted by folks who would like to find a dog that looks, or acts, just like their last dog. In my experience that often leads to disappointment, as each dog is an individual and may not behave like their predecessor, no matter how good a trainer you are.

I picked up a book at the Canine Conference called Train the Dog in Front of You just because I liked the title. It does go on to say that the human will have the best training results from taking a good look at various aspects of each dog's personality and working with them instead of having expectations based on a previous dog.

That said, I do find myself drawn was just a year old. Through no fault of his own he has ended up at the shelter again.

Teddy has big dark soulful eyes and a soft fawn-colored coat. He is a cuddly guy that walks nicely on the leash and is happy to sit quietly and wait while phone calls are returned (something I do a lot).

We know he lived with at least one other dog. In walks with other shelter dogs he has behaved nicely and when I took one of my dogs up to walk with him, he was very polite. Teddy is not up for adoption at the shelter as he has been a little nervous with strangers who are standing outside of his kennel, though the minute he sees the leash, he is a happy fellow.

It's understandable that he might be a little confused about being back in a kennel after four years in a home. Teddy has been affectionate with everyone he has met and we think he would make a nice companion.

To meet this friendly fellow, contact us at redwoodpalsrescue@gmail.com or leave a message on our voicemail at (707) 633-8842.

We think Teddy could go straight into an adoptive home, but we would also consider a foster in order to help him get out of the shelter.

Nova is still just a teenager at about six months old. She was terrified when she first came to the shelter and we would have to carry her out to the play yard when we first started working with her.

Soon we found that she loves other dogs and was willing to follow them from her kennel to the outside world, where she could run and play with the others. Now that she knows that she is safe, she has become a pretty good little walker. She likes her toys and can entertain herself tossing a soft toy around. Amazingly, she doesn't seem to be much of a chewer and keeps her toys in one piece.

Nova already knows sit and is highly treat-motivated so she should be easy to train. She likes to stay close to her handler. She loves to spin and bow to get other dogs to play with her and can be quite silly in her antics. Nova will be on the small side, probably no more than 35 or 40 pounds when fully grown.

She is available through the Humboldt County Animal Shelter located at 980 Lycoming Ave. in McKinleyville. The shelter's phone number is (707) 840-9132.

Teddy and Nova are both altered, microchipped and current on their vaccinations. We think you'll like them! Contact us today!

to dogs that remind me of my own in one way or another (though we are at our house limit and cannot take anymore!). Here are two that caught my eye.

Big Teddy Bear was adopted from the shelter four years ago when he waiting to be adopted. She is a sweet Akita mix who has already shown that she gets along well with other dogs, cats and all humans.

Her fosters all remark on how well behaved she is, especially when she sits and waits while a car passes during her walks. At about 3 and a half months, she is playful, cuddly, and ready to find her forever home.

If you would like to see if Wendy could be the right pup for you, head over to 88 Sunny Brae Center in Arcata to meet her and fill out an application!

We're always happy to set up an adoption trial to see how they adjust to your household. Animal visitation hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with a photo ID.

All of the animals at Companion Animal Foundation have been spayed/neutered, treated for parasites and are up to date on their vaccines. If you have any questions about a particular animal or would like to know more about the adoption process, give us a call at (707) 826-7387 or email cafadoption@gmail.com.

Our adoptable animals can be found online at caf-animals.org.

Wendy is playful, cuddly and ready for her forever home

Wendy, by some mystery, is the last of her sibling
